IN RE: PROCLAMATION, NATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATOR'S WEEK

The following Proclamation was approved upon motion of Agnes G. Queen, second by Thomas V. Fealy, vote unanimous for TELECOMMUNICATOR'S WEEK:

A TRIBUTE TO DISPATCHERS In HONOR OF TELECOMMUNICATOR'S WEEK
"EXCERPTS"
CHIEF THOMAS WAGONER OF LOVELAND, COLORADO POLICE DEPARTMENT

"Someone once asked me if I thought that answering phones for a living was a profession. I said, "I thought it was a calling. And so is dispatching."

I have found that dispatchers are the unsung heroes of public safety. They miss all the excitement of riding in a speeding car with lights flashing and sirens wailing. They can only hear of the bright orange flames leaping from a burning building. They never get to see the joy on the face of worried parents as they see their child begin to breathe after it has been given CPR.

Dispatchers sit in darkened rooms looking at computer screens and talking to voices from faces they never see. They connect the anxious conversations of terrified victims, angry informants, suicidal citizens and grouchy officers. They are the calming influence for all of them, the quiet, competent voices in the night that provide the pillars for bridges of sanity and safety. They gather information from agitated people who can't remember where they live, what their names are, or what they just saw. They calmly provide all the information to officers, firefighters, or paramedics without error the first time every time.

Dispatchers do five things at once and do them well. While questioning a frantic caller, they type all the information, tip off another dispatcher, put another caller on hold and listen to an officer run a plate for a parking problem. To miss the plate number is to raise the officer's ire, to miss the caller's information is to endanger the same officer's life, but most do not understand that.

Dispatchers have two constant companions, other dispatchers and stress. They depend on one, try to ignore the other, they are yelled at by callers, taken for granted by the public, and criticized by officers. The rewards they get are inexpensive and infrequent.

Dispatchers come in all shapes and sizes, all races, both sexes and all ages. They are blondes, brunettes and redheads. They are outgoing, quiet, single, married, plain, handsome and beautiful. No two are alike, yet they are all the same.

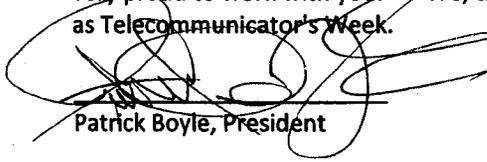

Dispatchers are people who were selected in a difficult hiring process to do an impossible job. They are as different as snowflakes, but all have one thing in common-they care. They enjoy being the lifeline of their community, that steady voice in a storm, the one who knows how to handle every emergency and does it with style, grace and an uncompromised competence.

Dispatchers play many roles: therapist, doctor, lawyer, weatherman, operator, priest and secretary. Few people must jump through their emotional work-shifts, only rolling to a stop after 10 or 12 hours. Dispatchers are expected to go home on steady feet, no queasiness and let the job go. If they hold it in they are closed off, if they talk about the job they are whiners, if it bothers them it adds more stress and if it doesn't they wonder if they are becoming immune.

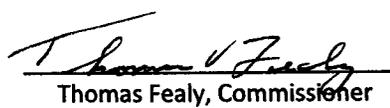

Dispatchers are expected to have the following:

- the compassion of Mother Theresa
- the wisdom of Solomon
- the interviewing skills of Oprah
- the gentleness of Florence Nightingale
- the patience of Job
- the voice of Striesand
- the knowledge of Einstein
- the answers of Ann Landers
- the humor of Letterman
- and the endurance of the Energizer Bunny.

Dispatchers are a unique and talented person who can do this job and do it well. It is fitting and proper that we take a few minutes or hours this week to honor each and every one of these wise men women for the job that you do. This recognition is insufficient but it is very sincere. It takes a special person to do what you do, we thank you. You are our heroes, and we are very proud to work with you." We, the Lewis County Commission, proclaim this week - April 15, 2013 through April 19, 2013 as Telecommunicator's Week.
